Overview:

Biblicalapedia is a wiki dedicated to documenting and discussing various aspects of the Bible. Users of any faith or no faith are invited to participate by reading and writing content, and by joining in on discussions. The wiki also plans on hosting a free Bible study course. Given their similar subject matter, the wiki has made a point to distinguish itself from the Bible Sermons Wiki.

Given the potential activity a wiki on the Bible could generate, the success of this wiki is very important to the Community Support Team. We want to ensure that the administrators have all the skills, knowledge, and experience they need to cultivate the best wiki experience for their users and provide the best information and discussions about the Bible that they can.

Objectives and Key Results

The core goal of the mentor team will be to empower the Biblicalapedia admins with the knowledge, skills, and experience they need to continue providing a fun and engaging wiki experience. Mentors should inspire the wiki to grow beyond what they think is possible with their current knowledge and experience, and to continue on the path towards even greater success in the future.

Specific learning areas requested by the admins are as follows:

- Effective communication and consensus between administrators.
- Community outreach and attracting contributors: strategies for building a larger community on Wikia. Include social media.
- Best ways of improving current content: trying to clean up articles that need to be rewritten, deleting articles to comply with new editing guidelines, category maintenance, and templates.
- Search Engine Optimization. Include the pitfalls of “-pedia” in a title.
- How to qualify for programs such as Community Development and spotlights.

Other areas recommended by Community Support:

- Overview and encouragement of currently disabled features that can help build a larger community and more content; Message Wall, Comments, Achievements.
- Introduction to video on Wikia, the Related Videos module, and the Wikia video library: <http://video.wikia.com>
- Anything else the admins request, pending enough time to cover it.
